Vitamin A for Dogs:

Added to the proven benefits for vision, this vitamin is also responsible for growth, fetal development, immune function, and cell function.

B Vitamins for Dogs:

The B vitamins are a group of important vitamins that play a role in your dog's health; Thiamine helps regulate energy and carbohydrate metabolism, Riboflavin, B12, and niacin help facilitate enzyme function.

Vitamin B6 is especially vital. This vitamin is responsible for glucose generation, red blood cell and nervous system function, hormone regulation, immune response, niacin synthesis, and gene activation.

Pantothenic acid helps with energy metabolism. Folic acid plays a role in amino acid and nucleotide metabolism and in mitochondrial protein synthesis.

Vitamin C for Dogs:

Vitamin C is an important antioxidant. It scavenges potentially harmful free radicals in the body.

Vitamin D for Dogs:

Vitamin D, allows your dog's body to balance minerals like phosphorous and calcium for healthy bone growth and maintain healthy muscles and bones.

Vitamin E for Dogs:

Vitamin E is one of defenses against oxidativedamage. This is also essential for cell function and fat metabolism.
